Parmenide tables are made using two slabs joined using transparent resin; the two side can maintain the original shape of the trunk or can be cut straight or in different shape.

This table with its contemporary lifestyle design, preserve the unique grain from each individual block of wood. The wood's color has been beautifully modified by the passage of the time. The edges of the two boards that comprise the table retain their original form, highlighting thousands of years of natural aging.

The two boards are joined with transparent resin.

Oil finish based on natural wax and water, that doesn't alter the original color of the wood.

The certificate of the C14 carbon test states the uniqueness and the authenticity of each piece

All tables are available in custom sizes

In a very humid environment wood acquires humidity and size increase. These subtle reactions are natural movements and not considered as a defect.
